A Bloody Killing.

On Sunday some three and a half miles south of Jeffersonville, Horace Reynolds, a 17-year-old boy, was shot from ambush and killed by John Hawkins, a man living in the same neighborhood. It seems some weeks since Reynolds induced a woman living with Hawkins as his wife, to leave him and accept him (Reynolds) for a partner instead. Hawkins himself said, come into possession of this woman by inducing her to leave her lawful husband. After the woman had left him it is told Hawkins made dire threats against Reynolds. Sunday about 11 o'clock Reynolds' brother was standing not far from their home when the report of a gun startled him, more particularly as one of the twigs were cut off a tree in Reynolds' hand. He broke and ran for help. Finding some one shortly he returned and soon located where he thought the shot was fired, but was afraid to find his brother, Horace, lying with gunshot wound in his back and his head almost severed from his body by the savage strokes of a bloody butcher's knife. Near the body was found a gun belonging to John Hawkins. Search was made for the murderer but he was not to be found, and in this writing has not been arrested.

The revenue of the Government from customs during July was $4,461,047 more than in July, 1894.

Negro Shooting.

On Saturday night the negroes had a festival in the Masonic Temple Hall. During its progress Will Orear, who works for Mr. J. D. Wilson, and Charlie Shaw, who works for the Telephone and Electric Light companies, became involved in a quarrel over a woman. Orear left and went to a dance at a house on "Tenny Hill." Shaw followed him and there the trouble was renewed over another negro woman. Shaw was put out of the house, but still hung around, and Orear slipped out the back way and went to Mr. Wilson's where he had a double barrel shotgun, procured the weapon, as he says, simply for protection, and started home. On the way the two negroes again met and this time both were ready. Orear used his shotgun and Shaw his pistol. Orear was shot in the hand, the ball shattering the bones and running up the arm, making a painful wound. Orear dropped his gun when shot and Shaw running in on him picked him up and threw him over a fence. Shaw came out unhurt.

Death of Mrs. Geo. G. Hamilton.

Mrs. Anna W. Hamilton, wife of George G. Hamilton, died at her home on Flat Creek, on Saturday night. Mrs. Hamilton had suffered a surgical operation, under the effects of which she died. A funeral service was held at the home on Sunday evening, and the remains were taken to Covington, yesterday, where they will be buried to-day.

Mrs. Hamilton was a splendid type of Kentucky womanhood. Beautiful in person and more beautiful in mind and moral character, she won by her charming gracefulness, all who came within the sphere of her influence. She was full of those graces of manner and hearty sincerity of speech that bespeak a heart full of loving gentleness and cheerful good will. The joys, sunny manner, the bright and cheery word, the ever ready ring of silvery laughter, all of which coming spontaneously, were index fingers pointing to the happy spirit within, while out of her face shone a soul as honest and as steadfast as the stars which instinctively told the stranger here was one he could trust. She had not only the rare talent of winning at once the love and confidence of the stranger, but she possessed the much more valuable one of binding her friends to her with bonds of steel. She possessed every quality to make her home a happy one, and with a prodigal liberality she exercised them. It is no wonder then that such a woman won the love of the man she chose for a companion, and that it should be subject of common remark among those who know her, that she kept her husband her lover always. We may not know what are God's purposes in taking away those who seem of so much necessity to us ere 'tis high moon with them, nor why.

The good die young. While they tell their hearts are dry.

As summer dews, hark to the sycamore. Walt Whitman when thus stricken wrote:

"We know not what it means this death heart pain. This death to take our daily walk in it again. We know not to what other sphere, the loved ones who leave us. Nor why we're left to wonder still, nor why we do not know."

"But we know, our loved and lost, if they should come this day. Should come and ask us: 'What is life? not one of us can say.' 'Life is a mystery as deep as ever death can be; 'Yet, oh, how sweet it is to us this life we live and see.'"

"Then might they say their vanished ones, and blessed is the thought. No death is sweet to us, beloved, though we may think you naught. We may not tell it is the 'quick,' this mystery of death."

"Ye may not tell us, if ye would, the mysteries of death. Ye may not tell us, if ye would, the mysteries of death."

"The child who enters life comes not with knowledge or intent; So those who enter death must go as 'little child, first and last.' Nothing is known, but I believe that God is over head, And as life is to the living so death is to the dead."

A special received from Versailles says Newt Lane, late of this county, shot and mortally wounded a man named Rhodenbaugh and killed Rhodenbaugh's son yesterday afternoon. A later telegram says the elder Rhodenbaugh died a few hours after being shot. Up to the time of press we had been unable to secure further particulars.

A Shooting in Bath.

On Saturday Clay Jones, who runs a coal yard in this city and Bob Yarbber, who drives a coal cart for Jones, called on George Thomas, Annie Politer and Lucy Boone, three women from a disreputable house of this city and took them out to a picnic on the Forge Farm near Preston, in Bath County. The decent people who were there enjoying themselves objected to the introduction of this class of persons into their assembly. But the Boone woman seconded by her female companions proceeded to take possession of the platform which was quickly given up to them by the respectable people. The soiled doves made themselves as innocuous as possible and a messenger was dispatched to Owensville for the marshal and his deputies. These reached the ground about half past one o'clock, Jones and his companion, the Politer woman, had not waited for the marshal to come but had jumped in their buggy and made for home. Not so with Yarbber and his degraded pair. They stayed to have the thing out. It did not take long for the marshals to take the women into custody and were proceeding with them to their buggies when Yarbber without warning drew his pistol and shot Marshal Wm. Mark twice, once in the arm and once in the back. In the confusion resulting from the shooting, Yarbber made his escape and has not been apprehended so far as heard from. Yarbber's home is in the immediate neighborhood of his crime and being previously acquainted with country he had no difficulty in hiding.

Marshal Mark's wounds are fortunately only flesh wounds and while severe are not necessarily dangerous. One ball entered the cheek just at the angle of the jaw and came out near the corner of the mouth, the other entered the arm at the elbow and was cut out near the wrist.

A Wow and a Wampus.

Last week the City Marshals began enforcing the city ordinance requiring a license tax to be paid on all dogs. By some of the owners of canines this was met by more or less opposition. Among those who did not like the tax was our worthy Postmaster, George C. Everett. He refused to pay or allow his dogs to be killed, was arrested and fined and then refused to either appeal the case or pay or repley the fine, preferring to go to jail. He had made arrangements for a writ of habeas corpus to be gotten out in case the orders of the Court were executed; and he was scarcely behind the bars before the writ was served. A trial was had before Circuit Judge John E. Cooper, and Everett won. Judge Cooper ordering his discharge.

This is story No. 1.

Story No. 2 is a little different. About the same date as the above a man named A. Short, Postmaster at Easton, came to Mt. Sterling in answer to a letter from Mr. W. W. Thompson, cashier of the Traders' Deposit Bank of this city, saying he (Thompson) had a day or two before sent him $250 or registered letter. Mr. Short soon satisfied himself, as indeed did Mr. Thompson, that the letter had by some accident failed to be sent to this postoffice for register. Mr. Short left for home, having received his money from the bank.

This was story No. 2.

The Ashland Sun of August 2 startled, and not a little provoked, the ire of Postmaster Everett by story No. 3, which reads as follows:

"Postmaster Everett at Mt. Sterling has been having trouble and was in jail yesterday. He was to have his trial this morning but we have not heard how he came out. The charge was that he took $250 from a registered letter."

This fell like a thunder-bolt at Postmaster Everett's feet. If there is one thing Mr. Everett is jealous of, more than another, it is his reputation for conducting the business of his office on strictly honest lines. He has something of a quick temper and when it gets the better of him he is somewhat unreasonable sometimes. Therefore, when he read the item he foolishly, as he himself says, jumped at the conclusion that Mr. Thompson had inspired it. Going to the cashier's office he undertook to call Mr. Thompson to account. Mr. T., who saw the ridiculousness of the charge Mr. Everett was making, only laughed at him, but this only served to raise the Postmaster's ire still more.

At length he completely lost control of himself at something that was said, and "went for" the cashier A. Sullivan. Thompson, while taken by surprise, came back like a Corbett, till friends ran in and pulled the pugilists apart. Yesterday Postmaster Everett went before Police Judge Turner and paid for his fun like a little man.

Mr. Everett was to leave last night for Ashland to interview the "Sun" man and find out what he has to say about his authority for such statements as were made in his issue of August 2. We can assure our brother of the Sun that Postmaster Everett may get angry sometimes, and he may even be inclined to scrap a little, before one of cooler blood would think he had sufficient provocation, but—he won't steal.

THE ADVOCATE

OLDEST LIVING LANGUAGE

Science That Mexico is the Cradle of Primitive Man.

In the first place it was obviously necessary to find, if possible, a key to the hieroglyphics in which the mural inscriptions are written, and to the solution of this problem Dr. Le Plongeon directed all of his efforts, says the Reviews of Reviews. For a long time his attempts in this direction were futile, and it was only after the most prolonged and careful analyses of the characters that he at length stumbled upon a clue. The discovery was about this: It happened to observe that certain signs carved upon the walls of one of the buildings closely resembled those of the ancient Egyptian alphabet, with which he was familiar. This led him to seek for further points of resemblance, which he also found. The next step was to determine the language of the inscriptions. Knowing how excessively conservative are the aborigines of Yucatan in all respects, Dr. Le Plongeon inferred that probably the language spoken by them at the present day might have at least some affinity with that of the mysterious writings on the walls. To satisfy himself on this head he devoted himself to a patient study of the living tongue as spoken by the fierce and warlike tribes known as the Quiches, who dwell amid the fastnesses of the mountains in Guatemala, and who have maintained their independence against all invaders. These tribes are the direct descendants of the ancient Mayas, and as Dr. Le Plongeon discovered, they have retained the ancient language of their ancestors in almost its pristine purity.

The Maya language is one of the very oldest tongues known to us, quite as old as Sanskrit, if not still more ancient. By giving to the mural characters the same phonetic value which they possess in the language of the Quiches, the doctor found that they formed intelligible words and phrases, and he quickly then perceived that the language of the inscriptions was identical with that still spoken by the aborigines. The construction of the entire alphabet followed and with that key Dr. Le Plongeon has succeeded in fully deciphering these hitherto incomprehensible hieroglyphics. The comparison of the hieroglyphic of the Mayas with that of the ancient Egyptian reveals a similitude which amounts practically to identity. Dr. Le Plongeon furthermore points out that there exists a singularly close resemblance between the grammatical forms and the syntax of the two tongues, many of the words and characters having a precisely similar meaning in the two languages. Stranger still, the initial letters of the Maya names for the various objects which constitute the Egyptian alphabet are the very letters so represented; from this it would seem, therefore, that both of these people acquired the art of writing from the same source, or that one of them taught the art to the other.

Dr. Le Plongeon next turned his attention to the few known MSS. of the Mayas which escaped destruction at the hands of fanatic Bishop Land, who destroyed the Spanish invaders. These MSS. are written on sheets of parchment prepared from deer skin, in the colored characters of an alphabet which is supposed to have been formulated after the invasion of the Nabuhts in the early centuries of Christian era. The Mayas are also known to have made a species of paper from the bark of the mulberry tree by a process similar to that employed by the Egyptians in preparing the papyrus. Of the extent, MSS. the most important is that known as the Troano MS., which is in the British Museum. It is a very ancient work, dealing mostly with the subjects of geography and history, and it is furnished with numerous illustrations. This Dr. Le Plongeon has succeeded in translating, and from it we learn that in ancient times the Peninsula of Yucatan was called "Mayax," meaning the "first or primitive land." It gave its name to the whole empire of the Mayas, which extended from Tehuantepec on the north to the Isthmus of Darien on the south, and thus comprised all those countries which constitute Central America. The two chief cities were Uxmal, which was the city of government, and Chichén-Itzá, which was the great metropolis and the center of the ancient Maya civilization, whither came men of learning from all parts of the world. In the illustrations of the Troano MS. some of these visitors are depicted as bearded men like the ancient Assyrians. The ruins of these cities still exist, and to them Dr. Le Plongeon devoted his chief attention.

MODERN GAMES ARE VERY OLD.

We are Still Playing Those Invented Long Ago.

Base Ball Was Played by the Indians.

NOVELTIES RARELY SUCCEED

Few of the hundreds of new games that are invented every year become popular, says the New York World. They may be seen in any toy store by the score—lawn games and parlor games, games of cards and games of skill. They are a melancholy sight, for not one of them will ever take the place of the old stand-bys of infancy and boyhood. Even the names of most of them will never be heard of by the majority of American boys and girls. This is the logic of history.

It seems an easy matter to invent a game; the best games are so simple—a popular game was never invented. Every one of them has grown, and the best of them have been growing for a hundred years. Scientific men tell us that all sorts of queer creatures once lived on this earth—great lizards with wings; sea monsters, half whale, half seal, and rhinoceroses larger than elephants. All these have died away because they were not fitted to live, while those animals that were fit for life have gone on growing better and better, till some—the horse, for instance—we could not do without. It is just so with games. Those live that are fit to live, and the rest die.

Our best games form a sort of aristocracy; their pedigrees run back to very ancient times, and no modern upstart can compete with them. Take base-ball and cricket for instance—probably the most popular outdoor games of modern times—the one in our own country, the other in England. They are first cousins, and their hold on American and English boys is in all probability due to the fact that they each unite two strong lines of descent—that of the bat and ball games—to which tennis, lacrosse, hockey, croquet, and more distantly, billiards also belong, and that of the goal games, such as tag, puss-in-the-corner, I spy, and dozens of others. All the nations we know anything about had bat and ball games ages ago. Nobody invented the bat and ball; they grew up with our civilization from the time when little savages used to knock about a pebble or a fruit with a stick. So with the goal games—they have always been popular. Their name is still legion. The goal part (that is running from base to base) is a much more important part of the game in base-ball than it is in cricket, and for this reason we Americans are justified in looking upon base-ball as the better game, all other things being equal. To be sure, neither base-ball nor cricket is the game it was 300 years ago, but both have grown, not changed.

Any one who chooses may trace the growth of cricket from the year 1300. It is not so easy to trace the pedigree of base-ball, for just as with a great many American families, there is a break in the record back in colonial times. It is known to have been played by the Indians. It is a thoroughly American game, and no one loves it less because some people claim rounders as its ancestor and others reject the claim with scorn.

As for indoor games, we may prove their nobility in just the same way. Chess comes down to us from the ancient Hindoos, by way of Persia. Checkers were played in Egypt and then in Greece and Rome. Cards have their appearance in Europe in 1350 and the Chinese say they used them two centuries earlier than this. Ten pins was certainly in the Thirteenth century, and probably much earlier. All these have grown but they have not changed their nature.

Lawn tennis is only an offshoot of the old game of court tennis, said to have been brought into Gaul by Roman soldiers and still played. Again only a growth not a new device. There is a game—only a variation of the old pyramid game of checkers. How about parches? The pompous title, "A Royal Game of India," inscribed on the old parches, board, is often thought to have been only an advertising dodge, but it was quite true. Parches, called by the Hindoos pachisi, is widely played in Asiatic countries, and the Spanish explorers even found the Aztecs playing it under the name of Patolli, in Mexico, whither it may have been carried across the Pacific.

These and many other instances are worth thinking over deeply, for they teach a lesson. If any one is tired of the old games and wants something a little different, let him alter the old in the direction of growth rather than try to invent something quite different. The most successful inventors of games have followed this rule. Indeed, it is more than a rule—it is a law of nature. You might as well try to please the human palate with food made out of sand and sawdust as to force a man or boy to get enjoyment out of a game that does not contain the old, well-tried game elements.

STANFORD'S ONLY SON.

The Child in Whose Honor the University of California Was Founded

No prince, potentate, no founder of a nation or emancipator of a race, was ever honored with so magnificent a monument as that which is being erected to perpetuate the memory of a thirteen-year-old boy at Palo Alto, about thirty miles south of San Francisco, on the coast division of the Southern Pacific railroad, says the Kansas City Journal. This child, the son of Leland and Jane Lathrop Stanford, died some years ago in Rome, while he was making a tour of Europe with his tutor. His father and mother almost defied him, and dedicated one of the largest fortunes that man has ever accumulated to the education of other people's children, who from this time on forever are to render homage to his name.

Everything is preserved as he left it. The room he occupied in the villa, which has sheltered so much wealth and luxury and gaiety, has never been disturbed. His playthings lie as he placed them when he started away for a few months of pleasure. A toy railroad that was laid across the lawn and through the shrubbery to amuse him and give him a practical knowledge of the occupation of his father, and that which he was expected to follow, still lies there. His rusty rails are pathetic witnesses to a memory that must not be erased, and a shed is pointed out in which the tiny cars and locomotives, which cost thousands of dollars, are preserved.

His crude cabinet of curios, marked with his boyish hand, is the nucleus of a $1,000,000 museum, $300 acres of the best farming land in America, the finest stock farm in the world, with seventeen or eighteen high-bred horses, 8,000 acres of vines, valuable real estate in the city of San Francisco, thousands of thoroughbred cattle and personal property, which has been inventoried at $18,000,000 for taxation, but is believed to be worth much more, has been placed in the hands of a board of trustees, who are to erect a university to be called by his name and lend the influence of the child in shaping the character and developing the manhood of generations that are to come.

His bones lie in a stately mausoleum erected in a conspicuous place upon the campus, and those of his father were lately placed beside them with great ceremony and sorrow. A niche remains for the mother's casket, when the death angel calls her name. Then the great bronze doors are to be sealed, the key is to be melted, and the dome that is sheltered by the massive walls is to lie undisturbed until the last trumpet sounds, for the Stanford family will be extinct.

Budding.

Budding, says Henry Wallace, generally begins the last week in July with the native plums, followed by the Mahaleb cherry the first half of August. "The peach can be budded a week or ten days into September. The rule is to bud when the bark raises freely. The best budding material is raffia, a fiber imported from the tropics. It is cheap and can be bought at any seed store. It should be wet and hung up to dry several hours before using so that it will be only very slightly moist when used. Most people use it too wet so that it becomes loose when dry and fails to hold the bark.

Be Practical.

This is an age of practical issues, practical men, practical methods. The man who is not practical and up to date is crowded to the wall in all lines of business. Theology shows it. Sermons are no longer dry abstracts of psychological formulas and spiritual truths; but living epistles of spiritual realism. The church seeks to save through every avenue of human need. The soup-kitchens of our large cities, where myriads of hungry poor are fed and warmed, are practical applications of bible doctrines.

In education, the same great truth is apparent. No longer will the world approve or tolerate the merely theoretical. The demand is today for an education that can be handled, that can be used. We are educating lawyers in schools of law, physicians in schools of medicine, farmers in schools of agriculture, business men and women in Commercial schools. A commercial education pays because it is practical. It pays everyone; because, whether man or woman, whether lawyer, physician, merchant, farmer or mechanic, whether rolling in wealth or toiling for his daily bread, the proper conduct of his business affairs depends upon himself. If he knows how to do it he is fit to do it. If not, he is fit for nothing.

The dates for the joint discussions between Gen. Hardin and Col. Bradley, and the conditions that will govern same are as follows: Louisville, Monday night, Aug. 19. Mayfield, Wednesday, Aug. 21. Hopkinsville, Friday, Aug. 23. Bowling Green, Monday, Aug. 26. Litchfield, Wednesday, Aug. 28. New Castle or Eminence, Friday, Aug. 30.

Covington, Saturday night, Aug. 31. Crutcher, Monday, Sept. 2. Nicholasville, Tuesday, Sept. 3. Winchester, Wednesday, Sept. 4. London, Friday, Sept. 6. Morganfield, Monday, Sept. 9. The speaking at all these points, except Louisville and Covington, will begin at 2 o'clock p. m. Gen. Hardin opening the debate at Louisville, and the candidates alternating at each appointment thereafter. The first speaker to have an hour and fifteen minutes, and the second an hour and thirty minutes for reply, and the first fifteen minutes for rejoinder. No new matter to be introduced in the rejoinder. The Democracy of the State hopes to have these political leaders at other points and when the committee again meets Mr. Sterling will speak for an appointment. It is possible the speaking of Mr. Bradley should be extended over Eastern Kentucky.

The Kentucky and South Atlantic Railroad.

The preparations which have been going on for some weeks to widen the track of the Kentucky and South Atlantic Railway (Coal Road) were completed yesterday and the road was changed from a narrow to a broad gauge track. The standard gauge cars are now running over the road. There does not seem at present any prospect of the road being extended, yet we doubt if there is a feeder in the entire C & O system that could be made so valuable to it as could the Coal Road if extended thirty or forty miles further into the coal and timber region.

Lo at the rates $125 round trip Mr. Sterling, Ky. to Ashland and return including a steamboat ride to Catlettsburg, Ky. and Ironton, O. Dr. E. P. White Dead.

On last Friday about noon, Dr. E. P. White was found dead on a cot at his home on High Street; and from the decomposed condition of his body, it appeared that he had been dead for two or three days and perhaps longer. He had been to the room of his only sister, Mrs. Helen Gatewood, on Tuesday before and some of our citizens are confident they had seen him as late as Wednesday noon. Mr. White was dressed, and a letter from one of his friends was by his side where it had fallen when death came. It is the general opinion that he died suddenly from heart trouble. Dr. White was in his sixty eighth year and was pensioner of the Mexican war. He had lived here most of his life. He was educated in the boarding schools of Virginia, the home of his nativity, and graduated with honors in medicine in the City of New York in 1850, but practised his profession only a short period. At one time in his life he was worth considerable money; but by losses on horses and by the emancipation bill the greater part of his fortune was swept away. For twenty-five years he gave his life entirely to caring for his invalid mother who preceded him to the grave eight years, since which time he has lived alone in his home where his body was found. He was removed by Coroner George Easlin to his undertaker's shop where an inquest was held resulting in a verdict in accordance with the above statement. From there his body was removed to Macphail Cemetery, where, after a short service conducted by Elder W. T. Tibbs, all that was mortal of Dr. E. P. White with the setting of the sun was lowered into the grave. Dr. White was a character not to be seen every day. He lived a life of seclusion, finding entertainment in the secular journals of the day and in his Bible, which had come down from generations.

He was a man of the keenest sense of honor giving to everyone what was due them and exacting not one fractional part of a cent more than what was right. Without an enemy, he bore malice to none, preferring to live a humble quiet life in debt to no man rather than in pomp and splendor upon the belongings of others. He was a positive character, proud of his ancestry, being closely connected with legislators, congressmen, governors, and senators. The beauty of his life was exemplified in his devotion to his mother, whom for twenty-five years, he cared for as a child and whose death he deeply mourned. He has left a family of seven one sister for whom he had the greatest love. Dr. White was a christian man, a faithful member of the Methodist Church. Though reduced almost to death, he was always ready to do his part and the pious he contributed more than the thousands of the more favored. He did the best he could and fully ripened for the harvest he has been gathered to his reward, where with the mother he loved and served his happy in the presence of Him who so bountifully bestows. He was a beautiful life and we would that more men would prove their devotion as he did. We may have had many troubles, yet they were unknown. What ever they were, how many "there was not one trouble too much; there was not one sorrow too piercing." The heavier the burden, the purer the man; and doubtless in that land from which no traveler returns he is thanking God for the very things that brought tears to his eyes in this. With the death of Dr. White, another chapter closes. It was an interesting life not to be forgotten by the present generation. Peace to his ashes.

A Tent of the Knights of the Macabees will be organized in Mt. Sterling about the last of next week with a good charter membership. Dr. K. J. Hampton, of Winchester, Deputy District Commissioner for Kentucky, is still in the city and will receive additional names until the date of organization. The Knights of the Macabees is a new Order in Kentucky, but in Michigan, its original home, there are more than 80,000 members. The Order is very commendable from the fact that, besides its strong social and fraternal features, it combines life, accident and disability benefits, and also does its organization $4,678, 976.27 to June 30, 1895. The Order of the Macabees is the second largest numerical strength of the "National Fraternal Congress," being more than 300,000 strong and increased 61,613 last year.

Did You Ever Think

That you cannot be well unless you have pure, rich blood? If you are weak, tired, languid and all run down, it is because your blood is impoverished and lacks vitality. These troubles may be overcome by Hood's Sarsaparilla, because Hood's Sarsaparilla makes pure, rich blood. It is in truth the great blood purifier.

A Silver Wedding.

On Wednesday evening, July 31, Mr. and Mrs. William N. Anderson gathered their friends together to celebrate with them their silver wedding. Many guests gathered at the home of this happy couple to wish them much joy and a hearty God speed. With a genuine hospitality they received and entertained their guests till, as the little girl visitor described it to her mother, "they made you feel like you was at home and they were the visitors." For a thoroughly enjoyable evening and night it is doubtful if there has for many years been any sort of entertainment within the borders of the county that equaled it.

It would take more space than we have and a more facile pen than we possess to describe the magnificent scene presented by the lawn lighted up by its hundreds of lanterns. Standing as the home does, upon a hill visible from far as you approach it, it looked like a picture from fairy land. One might easily have fancied some fairy godmother had set down a palace of her own building and had rubbed the heavens above of their stellar lights in order to give them to mortals below. If the object of Mr. and Mrs. Anderson was to furnish an evening of unalloyed pleasure to their more than four hundred guests, they succeeded to a marvellous degree in doing it. May they journey together as happily during the coming quarter of a century as they have done during the past one.

Arrangements have been made by Sheriff Wm. Shedd to erect the scaffold on which John Johnson, colored, is to be hung, August 10th, for the murder of poleman Evans, on Sam Turley's place to the south of the Spencer pike between old Fort Hill and town. The execution will take place at eleven o'clock and will be public.

MADE OF MOLASSES.

A Curious Pavement in a California Town.

Perhaps the oddest pavement ever laid is one just completed at China, Cal. It is made mostly of molasses, and if it proves all of the success claimed for it it may point a way for the sugar planters of the South to profitably dispose of the millions of gallons of the useless molasses which they are said to have on hand. The head chemist of a sugar factory at Chiles, Mr. E. Turko, was led to make certain experiments of which the new sidewalk, a thousand feet long, from the factory to the main street, is the result. The molasses used is a refined product, hitherto believed to be of no value. It is simply mixed with a certain kind of sand to about the consistency of asphalt, and laid like an asphalt pavement. The composition dries quickly and becomes quite hard, and remains so. The peculiar point of it is that the sun only makes it drier and harder, instead of softening it, as might be expected. A block of the composition, two feet long, a foot wide, and one inch thick, was submitted to severe tests and stood them well. Laid with an inch or so of its edge only resting on supports, it withstood repeated blows of a machine hammer without showing any effects of cracking or bending.

R. F. Maxwell, Mgr. Indiana Bicycle Co., City.

DEAR SIR.—Referring to the Waverley bicycle which I bought of you a few weeks ago, I will candidly admit that I am delighted with it. My first impression was one of surprise at the ease and smoothness of its motion. It appears to be ample strong and substantial in construction and every one must admit that it is most graceful in appearance. I consider it a strictly high grade machine; otherwise I should not have bought it. It is all you claim it to be. Wishing you every success, I remain yours truly,
